Key Tech Conference to Showcase Latest in Learning Technology at CSN

LAS VEGAS, January 17, 2012 — The College of Southern Nevada's Office of Technology Services invites members of the media to attend a key technology conference in higher education.

The 2012 CSN Tech Connection conference will take place all day Wednesday, Jan. 18, 2012, at the CSN Cheyenne campus, located at 3200 E. Cheyenne Ave., in North Las Vegas and is open to media.

Vendors from across the nation participate in this heavily attended event, which provides a wonderful opportunity for the CSN community to learn about new technology being used in the classroom and raises thousands of dollars for student scholarships.

The 2012 CSN Tech Connection will feature over 25 vendors that will demonstrate cutting-edge learning technology, including a state-of-the-art lecture capture system that allows students to stream lectures, and bookmark important or challenging sections, via the web.

Breakfast begins with registration at 7:30 a.m., followed by a keynote address from Punam Mathur, vice president of employee and community engagement at NV Energy at 8:30 a.m. Interesting workshops and exhibits, lunch and many more activities will take place throughout the day. LANDesk Software Product Manager for Security Solutions Ryan Worlton will provide the afternoon keynote at 12:30 p.m. on Protecting against the Human Threat Vector.

For more information, go to <http://www.csn.edu/techconnection>.
