Eleven short films produced by CSN students will be featured at the popular event

Oct. 5, 2018 – The College of Southern Nevada is proud to announce the 7th Annual Short Film Showcase.

The event, featuring award-winning student films, will take place from 6:30-9:30 p.m. October 12 on the North Las Vegas Campus.

“We are thrilled to host the Student Film Showcase again. The talent we have in our Videography and Film Program is truly inspiring,” said John Aliano, the program’s director. “These films rival the best short-film work being done by students anywhere today. I couldn’t be more proud of our students.”

CSN’s Videography and Film students have been nominated for 54 Student Production Award Emmys in the last four years, and have won 33 of those awards. This year, the students took home seven Student Production Emmys. Several winners will be among the 11 films screened at the Showcase.

The event has grown so popular that it has been moved to the 500-seat Nicholas J. Horn Theatre on campus. It is free and open to the public.

Media interviews with Aliano and student film makers are available upon request.
