

CSN Career Fairs Help Students Prosper

Students can showcase jobs skills to recruiters for some of the region's top employers

January 30, 2019 – The College of Southern Nevada will soon host its Spring 2019 Career Fairs, where dozens of employers will tap the local talent pool to fill hundreds of job opportunities and internships.

The first Career Fair is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. February 13 in the Paul E. Meacham Student Services Building lobby on the college's Charleston Campus. A second Career Fair is will be March 13 on CSN's North Las Vegas Campus. Both events are free and open to the public.

The open forum of the Career Fairs allows applicants to mingle with recruiters, learn about job openings and gather information about potential employers. Applicants should dress in interview attire, bring resumes and be prepared for on-the-spot interviews.

“We hold these career fairs throughout the year to help ensure that our students not only graduate, but that they are able to prosper once they leave CSN,” said Bradford Glover, director of Career Services & Reentry at CSN. “Students and other job seekers get a chance to meet potential employers face to face, so they're great networking opportunities. They're also an excellent way for job seekers to learn more about some of the region's premier employers.”

The wide array of organizations planning to attend include MGM Resorts International, Amazon, Waldorf Astoria Las Vegas, the House of Blues, Nike, the Clark County School District, Lowes and many more. For more information or to host an employer booth, contact CSN Career Services at 702-651-4700.
