

CSN Offers Free Financial Aid Workshops

Students can file financial aid applications now for the 2019-20 school year

November 12, 2018 – Officials at the College of Southern Nevada want to put the time-honored tradition of getting confused by financial aid paperwork behind us, so they're holding a series of FAFSA Workshops designed to help students figure it all out. There will be a workshop this month, one next month and more in the spring semester.

“The earlier you file the better your chances are for an award,” said Victoria Goeke, associate vice president for financial aid at CSN. “We want every student who is eligible for financial aid to receive it. A lack of resources shouldn't hold anyone back from getting a college education.”

Students can now file as early as October for aid for the following year, making CSN's workshops timely. Registration for the college's spring semester will open November 21, too. More than two-thirds of the students at CSN – Nevada's largest college – receive some form of financial aid.

Students and parents should bring with them, if applicable:

- Social Security Card
- W-2 Forms from all jobs in 2017
- Tax Forms 1099-Misc/1099-SSA
- 2017 Federal Tax Returns
- Child Support Documents (paid or received)
- 2017 Food Stamp Award Letter
- Untaxed Pensions/Retirement Plans
- FAFSA IDs if they already have one
