

ALYSE KNORR

Wolf Tours: Final Day

Commencement masks the growth, makes of them clients once more.
Their tragic foggy minds see an expulsion—a rejection rather than breath.
They paid good money and deserve their passport stamp, their pin.
They've never been good at goodbyes.
But this is the moment when Rodney outdoes the rest. Disastrous as a guide, gifted as a ghost, Rodney knows how to quell the clients' tantrums with a very old reflex and a very real remark. THANKS she says, looking into them with her golden lunar eyes. THANKS and they begin to quiet, stunned into reciprocity. Soon they'll all be weeping, howling THANKS

THANKS THANKS all night.
