Spring Enrollment Opens at CSN

Students should enroll early for the best selection of classes, locations

November 21, 2018 – Students looking to get a head start on next semester can beat the rush and sign up for classes at the College of Southern Nevada now.

Enrollment opens today for new students. Current CSN students are enrolling now.

“We always encourage students to choose their classes as early as possible to help make sure they get the sections they want at their chosen times and campuses,” said Clarissa Cota, CSN vice president for academic affairs. “At an institution as large as CSN, high-demand classes such as biology labs, oral communication and lower level math classes can fill up quickly.”

CSN enrolls 35,000 for-credit students each semester and more than 12,000 non-credit students each year. Offering more than 180 different degrees and certificates in over 70 academic programs, it is the state’s largest and most affordable college.

Those interested and not yet admitted can apply for free at www.csn.edu/apply. More than two-thirds of CSN students receive financial aid, including grants, loans and scholarships, and the college encourages all who are eligible to apply for aid. More information can be found at www.csn.edu/financial-aid.
